THE FOREIGN TRADE OF CHINA · IN 1887.

Statistical Secretary, I. M. C., on the foreign entire Foreign Import trade of the year.

trade of China in 1887 :--The first important fact connected with the Foreign Customs in 1887 was what I may call a final act in the direct fulfilment of the Chefoo Convention of 1876, namely, the introduction. on the 1st February, of the system of collecting the Duty and Likin on Opium simultaneously, and the right-conferred on Opium of entering bond. Following this new mode of dealing with Opium, and as a result of arrangements the origin of which can also be traced back to the stipulations of the Chefoo Convention, two new offices of the Foreign Customs were opened on the 2nd April at Kowloon and Lappa, to have supervision over the Revenue accruing to China out of the commerce carried on in junks between Hongkong and Macao respectively, and the mainland of China. The Custom Houses which had hitherto supervised this junk trade both with Treaty and non-Treaty ports had formed part of the Native Customs administration of the Kwangtong province. While these two new offices were opened on the 2nd April, they did not take over the entire supervision of this branch of Revenue until the 1st July.

Associated with the establishment of office of Customs at Kowloon, and as part of the international arrangement under which it The "Budget Général" of Indo-China has was established, there came into force in Hongkong, on the 1st June, a new Ordinance, placing the Opium trade within the Colony under special regulations. These regulations contained a simbusiness as before, subject to certain guaranteed

London was painted a pale, bilious yellow today in honor of Disrseli. It was the seventh auniversay of his death. Everybody wore the pale but rather pretty primrose. For days past they have been ruthlessly placked throughout the smoke of London; and if the author of "Vivian Gray" really loved the flower and could see the devastation, he would doubtless say with other great men: " Lord deliver me from my followers." The bronze statue in Westminster was covered with yellow chaplets from the Primrose League and Tory Duchesses, who made a pious pildeposited personal tributes in the way of more doing great damage. primroses at the foot of the statue of the man who succeeded in retarding progress for a short season. The Government papers enthuse over the undoubted universal observance of the day and draw from it the inference of the evergrowing popularity of the coercion policy in Ireland. It is undoubted that never before has the day been so generally observed. Everything animate that walks, creeps or stands still is wearing yellow. At her Majesty's Theatre there was a large meeting of the Primrose League, and amid great applause the secretary deposited a book on the tenth contary gathering with a little nineteenth century lightness and grace. MATTHEW ARNOLD BURIED. London, 19th April. Hundreds of well-known literary people travelled down to Staines this morning to be presont at the funeral of Matthew Arnold, at the Lalcham village church. Lalcham has no railway station, because Lord Lucas spent £60,000 to prevent the iron horse crossing his grounds, and he also wrote an interesting pamphlet, endeavouring to prove that the noise of railway friffic would prevent his hens from laying eggs. In vans, far a wagons of heterogeneous description, and some on foot on the maddy country road, the distinguished company reached the quaint old village. The church, of early English architecture, with its genuine ivymantled tower, was in view of the shaded vault where the poet's body was laid to rest.

It was midday when the bell commenced its mournful toiling. There were assembled in the church, among others whom I recognized, Professor Jowett, Lecky, the historian: Chief Justice Coloridge, Henry James, the novelist; Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Robert Browning, Mundella, Loonard Courtney, Sir Edwin Arnold and many other posts, painters and peers. Wreaths were sent by Tenuyson, Millais and Hughes, who, in "Tom Brown at Rugby," lovingly depicted the beautiful character of Dr. Arnold. The services were very simple, solomn, sincere, and in the strangely mingled congregation of simple villagers nover out of sight of Lalcham Church spire and the roaming cosmopolites there was not a dry eye. At the grave Dr. Bradley Dean of Westminster, read the concluding service, reciting the beautiful words of Revelation: "I heard a voice from beaven saying unto me write from henceforth blessed are the dead which die in 'the Lord, even so saith the Spirit, for they rest from their laburs." The company then separated, going many ways on their return to town. Dr. Bradley told me that a funeral in Westminster Abbey had been contemplated. present clearly demonstrated that Arnold possessed kindly personal attributes which were not seen or were not shown in America.
